

Exploring Intercultural Boundaries

Innovation
Inclusion
Inspiration

Thirteenth Annual Conference

November 6–9, 2013

Key Bridge Marriott
Arlington, Virginia USA

"I highly recommend the SIETAR conferences to anyone in or interested in the field."

"An excellent conference all around."

"Coming to a SIETAR conference is like coming home."

"I found the majority of the sessions I attended to be very helpful in presenting information and ideas and prompting me to connect session topics/information to my own professional and personal context and/or future aspirations."

"I have attended all 12 SIETAR-USA conferences and love the way they build on each other. Each has its own personality while retaining the traditions that help make SIETAR-USA what it is. The combination of continuity and uniqueness is a winner!"

—2012 SIETAR-USA Conference Attendees

SAVE THE DATE: Society for Intercultural Education, Training, and Research (SIETAR-USA) 13th Annual Conference, November 6–9, 2013

Theme: Exploring Intercultural Boundaries: Innovation, Inclusion, Inspiration

Interculturalists routinely live and work across different types of boundaries (physical, attitudinal, metaphorical, etc.) and help others to also successfully span the different types of transitions and boundaries that they encounter in their personal and professional lives. What are the ways that interculturalists do this work successfully? How do we create space for innovation, inclusion, and inspiration in our work?

Join us as we discuss these issues at the 13th Annual SIETAR-USA Conference November 6–9, 2013.

Whether you work in education, business, government, health care or the non-profit sector, you will leave the conference with a deeper understanding of cutting-edge practices and ways to foster connection with others, as well as personally inspired and ready to motivate others as you explore the boundaries of working with culture in all its forms.

Sign up for our e-mail list to receive updates about the conference, the proposal submission process and more.

sietarusa.org

SIETARUSA

Society for Intercultural Education
Training and Research

The Society for Intercultural Education, Training and Research in the United States of America (SIETAR-USA) is an educational membership organization for those professionals who are concerned with the challenges and rewards of intercultural relations. Our members work within many environments and professions—business and industry, consulting, training, K-12 and higher education, counseling, all aspects of the media and arts, to name a few. SIETAR-USA members bring a vast array of experience and perspectives to the field of intercultural relations, both in the USA and around the world.

SIETAR-USA is a point of connection for people from many cultural and professional backgrounds who explore differences on many levels; engage in cutting edge research related to cultural dimensions of interactions between and among individuals, organizations and political entities; continually search for and provide avenues to effective relations across cultures; and work with students and others to expand worldviews and build skills for successful interactions in intercultural arenas. These activities take place in multicultural or cross-cultural situations, within national borders or around the world.